

Great Country Houses & Gardens of Northern Ireland June 8 to 15, 2024 – Saturday to Saturday

Tour arrangements by Lani Summerville and Mark Donnelly

Ballywalter Park – Where we will stay for three-nights

Inspired by the architecture of Inigo Jones, who was the first to establish the Palladian style in 17th century England, followed by Lord Burlington, William Kent, Colen Campbell and other early 18th century English architects, Ireland at the same time developed its own dramatic Palladian movement starting with the new façade for the country house.

Over the past years a bright new political and economic era has been ushered into Northern Ireland and the glorious country houses of the province are an architecturally classical heritage to be discovered. This exclusive tour will include a three-night stay at the privately owned Ballywalter Park, an Italianate Palazzo built in 1846 and now the family home of Lord Dunleath, along with a two-night stay at the privately owned Crom Castle.

The tour is led by Lani Summerville of Classical Excursions, who has organized eight previous tours to Northern Ireland, along with Mark Donnelly, who is a noted expert on Irish decorative arts and antiques.

TOUR HIGHLIGHTS

Mount Stewart, Newtownards, County Down: Originally built in 1804 and later extended, the first architect was George Dance, the teacher of Sir John Soane. Filled with magnificent antiques, the Regency-styled house contains 22 chairs used at the Congress of Vienna (1815) and given to Mt. Stewart's owner, Lord Castlereagh, British Foreign Secretary and member of the Londonderry family. Mt. Stewart's gardens cover 80 acres and are considered the most complete in Ireland, thriving in the area's subtropical microclimate. Overlooking Strangford Lough is the exquisite small banqueting pavilion inspired by the Temple of the Winds in Athens. Our visit includes drinks with Lady Rose Lauritzen in her private apartments at Mount Stewart with a private tour of her personal gardens.

Florence Court, Enniskillen, Co. Fermanagh: An important Irish Georgian mansion, it was named after Lady Florence Cole, the wife of Sir John Cole, the owner who probably had built around 1730 the finally proportioned center block of the house. A later generation in the 1760s added flanking arcaded wings with end pavilions. The vigorous treatment of the exterior is repeated in the interior. Lavish Rococo plaster decoration is featured which was painstakingly restored after a fire in 1955. The Venetian Room, staircase and dining room have the most elaborate plasterwork. The house is filled with 18th-century Irish furniture.

Castle Coole, Enniskillen, Co. Fermanagh: Considered the finest Neo-classical country house in Ireland, it nearly bankrupted its owner, Armar Lowry-Corry, Earl of Belmore, in his attempt in the 1790s to outdo his brother-in-law and neighbor, the Earl of Enniskillen, at Florence Court. The quality of the Portland stone masonry is exceptional, with the design on all four sides of equal perfection. It continues inside, with harmonious unity and balance in the joinery and plasterwork. The final plans were executed by the English architect, James Wyatt. The plasterer was Joseph Rose, who had been hired by Robert Adam to work at Syon House and Harewood House in England. Another glory of Castle Coole is that almost all of the Regency furniture is original and still in place. Our tour is hosted by Lord Belmore who will show us the original Wyatt drawings from his personal collection.

A three-night stay at the privately owned Ballywalter Park, hosted by Lord Dunleath. Built in 1846 for Andrew Mullholland (whose son became the first Lord Dunleath) and designed by the prominent Belfast architect, Sir Charles Lanyon, the house is the best-preserved example of the Italianate palazzo style in Ireland.

Seaforde Demesne (Demesne = land attached to a manor) has been in the Forde family for over 400 years. Private lunch and tour of the house with Lady Anthea Forde We will explore the Seaforde Gardens and the Tropical Butterfly House. Seaforde contains rare specimen trees and plants from around the world and a maze.

A private tour at Barons Court, hosted by His Grace, Duke of Abercorn. The house was started in 1779 by the architect George Steuart (who also designed Attingham Hall in Shropshire 1783). Later architects involved in redesigning and completing Barons Court were John Soane and Richard and William Morrison. The result was a powerful seven-bay house with a rotunda located in the heart of the building. The main pediment contains the family coat of arms. The interiors range from the classical coffered rotunda encircled by a ring of Ionic columns to a typical Morrisonian library redecorated by the prominent English decorator, David Hicks.

A two-night stay at Crom Castle, hosted by the Earl of Erne.

Lunch and tour of the privately owned Killyreagh house & gardens with the owners Lord and Lady Anthony Hamilton, brother to the Duke of Abercorn.

Visit to the private 18th century Finnebrogue House, it has been meticulously restored by the owner Noel Lamb.

Clandeboy Estate, home of the late Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava. The property contains wooded gardens, formal gardens, walled garden, lawns and a lake. The estate was first settled in 1674 and the house dates to 1801-04.

On our way to Dublin, we will have a private visit to Ardbraccan House, Co. Meath. The current Palladian house of the 1730's replaced an earlier Tudor House
